If you play the piano pretty well, and are looking for some sweet after-dinner music, this is it. These arrangements are not watered down or dumbed down. They are tasteful, charming, and sophisticated, without being terribly difficult. I have had many of my advanced students work on and perform these pieces. They like "Bewitched, Bothered, and Bewildered" and "Falling in Love with Love." My personal favorite in this collection is "Where or When" from the old classic movie "Babes in Arms," a piece that is a bit neglected in the Richard Rodgers catalogue in light of his other blockbusters. Perhaps this is because of its somewhat perfunctory rendition as it appears in the movie, but over the decades it has taken on a burnished lustre with numerous artists covering it, including most gorgeously Diana Krall. When I play this arrangement in my home I feel like Diana might step out at any moment and start singing. Play this piece and the others in this collection and watch the atmosphere in your home become hauntingly romantic. A must in any piano library.

Lush and romantic -- not what we expected but much better. They highlight Rodgers' lush melodies so well, they're a pleasure to play and to listen to -- and to sing along with, for what is a Rodgers tune without a consummate Larry Hart lyric?

I have four of the Popular Performer Series and I like them all. The arrangements really come to life and, although they are intermediate to advanced, you will be motivated to learn them because they sound so good. As with the others, I wish this would include maybe 1/2 dozen more tunes as the nine in this volume just whet my appetite.
