Sterling Silver, Silverplate And Souvenir Spoons With Prices

Synopsis

Antique household items made from silver, both sterling and plated, fill these pages in over 1300 engravings from period catalogs. Detailed descriptions include pattern names and numbers, special features, and values lists. Many collectible souvenir spoons are shown along with table items from ash trays to wine coolers. The decorative tastes of a hundred years ago are represented in these images.

Customer Reviews

Spoons adorned with dazzling patterns and bas-relief engravings and other silver items are the subjects for this illustrated reference. Sterling silver utensil sets, combs, cups, baby spoons, tray and tea sets, jewelry boxes, and many other articles of silver are included, as well as a large section of souvenir spoons. 1996 VALUES -- Book Description

Whenever a book tries to be everybody's answer for everything it usually succeeds in being nobody's answer to anything. The author did a good job in selecting items he was familiar and interested in but the depth is lacking. I wish I could openly recommend this book but I can't. If you want one book to cover a lot of ground shallowly this might be for you.

Good book to have for reference. well planned and good photos and information... I will refer to it when researching silver.

The book is a lot of fun to look through. If you have already purchased several books on Victorian sterling and plate this would be an interesting addition to your library. If this is the only book you will be buying on the subject your needs would be better served by another book. This book consists of turn of the century catalog reprints. The reprints are sharp and they are interesting to look at but there is not a whole lot of information.

This would be a very informative and valuable addition to any ones library of silver research. The book has crisp and accurate black and white drawings of many hard to find patterns with a fair market value for the date published. The text is readable, the size is portable and easy to carry along on antiquing trips.
