Zhao Ziping works as a professional paper cutting artist at the Shanghai Arts & Crafts Research Institute, where he began his study of the art form in 1962. As a student of Wang Zigan, a distinguished artist who was known for his wonderful craftsmanship in Shanghai-style paper cutting, Mr. Zhao has developed a simple, fluid and imaginative style with his distinctive touch. In 1984, he had a successful solo exhibition at UN Headquarters in New York and in 2005, he was honored as a "Master of Arts & Crafts" by the Shanghai Municipal Government.

This is a clearly written book describing the history of Chinese paper cutting. I recommend it for anyone interested in the origin of paper cutting. It includes some of the basic Chinese symbols and the recommended method for freeform cutting.

Very detailed instructions. Gives examples of projects as well as the necessary tools to do the artwork. Love it!

The Beginner's guide to Chinese paper cutting was interesting to look at. Was given as gift to a child who likes it.

Too much writing, not enough patterns.
