Incorporating material Kelly once sold on floppy diskettes tied to his "Aradianic Faerie Faith" tradition, woven into a story largely plagiarized from the Da Vinci Code. The story itself features a motley crew "translating" the material referenced above. Large portions are simply their talking about what they think the texts means, and a justification of the F word. The onlyThat said, several issues crop up:* The material he wrote and incorporated into the larger story was actually written in the idiom of the days that it is claimed. The "dialogues" between several Jewish and Gnostic teachers were supposedly modelled off of the Neoplatonic dialogues. Sadly, the only thing that is actually linking the two is that claim. Case in point, NO legitimate formal dialogue (as literature in the Hellenistic and late Roman era) EVER began with "Hey there, would you like a snack?"Artistic license aside... the more important RED FLAG:* Again, within the material Kelly wrote as his "Aradianic Gospel", I find several lines where he insists that Diana and Aradia tell their followers that "if a man rapes you, try to enjoy it. The Christian ladies refuse to have sex with the Christian men, and that is why they are so mean." For someone trying to argue FOR sex-positive and sexually liberated spirituality, these REPEATED assertions made throughout the text (both in the purported "gospels" created by Kelly and incorporated into the story) AND the comments of the characters about said texts, the ONLY sexual liberation implied is that "Craft is all about sex"... and the author displays a disregard for the basic concepts of consent whilst feeding into rape culture.

Gang-raped and fiery assassination. Jesuit mugged and murdered. This is how the book begins; there's umpteen more drama before it ends. For many people, this will be a book of beaucoup blasphemies. But what is blasphemy and what is truth? Regular Christians will hate the questions and want to burn the author. Some Witchcraft people will see heresy and want to argue about it and disown the traitor. Many just won't care. There is the book in a hurry. Be sure to know the Bible, the Gnostics, Talmud Rabbis, classical Goddesses and Gods, modern Witchcraft liturgy and practice, and have an open mind. Have fun sorting it out. From Jesus, Mary the Magdalene, to Aradia.
