I own both Dover and Schirmer versions. Dover version is more "cramped", some would argue, more concise. For example, Consolation #3 is 3 pages in Dover, but 6 pages in Schirmer). Schirmer has fingering notations, next to none in Dover (only 4 to be exact, in Consolation #3). Spreading out the notes visually has the added benefit of aiding in timing, as the melodic right upper hand is in double time and the left hand accompaniment is in triplet time for most of this piece.

Great musical pieces!! Definitely for a more advanced pianist. This is not a beginners or hardly an intermediate book. But if you're more advanced in piano, than you'll love this book. Beautiful pieces that are a challenge!

I really love these Schirmer books. I know there are disagreements as to whether the Schirmer books are completely true to the original pieces or not, but my piano teacher had me playing out of several of them when I was growing up. This one of Liszt pieces is wonderful.

It is Liszt for piano, Wow, it does not get any better than that. I Love It!

Enjoying!
